

A Subterranean Pass discovered through the Sierra Nevada.

We take the following from the Mariposa Chronicle of Saturday. It may all be true, but it has an air of romance:

We publish the annexed extract from a letter received a few days since, written by an old friend, whose explorations in different parts of California have greatly assisted in developing her immense resources. Should this subterranean pass prove as practicable for a railroad route as our correspondent anticipates, the whole subject will receive an impetus scarcely dreamed of by the most ardent imagination. * * Having heard Maj. S.—speak of a very large and long cave that was somewhere near the head of the Yo-Semity Valley, and as the main-moat caves at Marble Springs, formed in the immense marble ledge that traverses the gold region of California, are more or less connected by fissures, it occurred to me that there might be a subterranean pass through the Sierra. The hostility of the Indians prevented my acting upon the idea at the time, but it was not forgotten, as soon as the beneficent influence of Lord B.—'s administration of Indian affairs had extended to that region, stimulated by a desire to render my name as illustrious as some of our distinguished California travellers, and at the same time benefit my country, after amply providing for the undertaking, I commenced my exploration.

I had observed while out against the Indians in 1851, that some Indians were pursuing a deer at or near a certain point at the head of the valley, and although we examined every rock and bush in the vicinity, we were unable to obtain any clue to their hiding place. On our return from the expedition the cave was mentioned to me incidentally, and I at once concluded that it was the secret haunt of the Indians. I accordingly directed my attention to this point. After having searched for three days without the slightest prospect of success attending our efforts, I resolved to adopt another plan; but accident, or fortune, accomplished what no plan could have done. Clambering among the mill-dewed and mossy rocks at the base of the lofty cliff, I had become so dusty that it became necessary for me to bathe. The idea of taking a shower bath struck my fancy, and I at once repaired to the fall, which exceeds in height the celebrated fall of the Himalaya; ordinarily, one cannot approach nearer than 100 yards of the falling body of water, owing to the spray or mist that hovers over and around "the cauldron;" but at this time there was a strong breeze blowing up the valley, sweeping aside the mist that hitherto had prevented my nearer approach. I was about divesting myself of my garments, when a gust of wind stronger than any that had preceded it, exposed to my astonished and joyful sight the long-sought cave. My ablutions were forgotten—I hurried back to my party, and made known the wonderful and fortunate discovery. The rest of the day was devoted to the preparation of torches; and on the following morning, after a hearty breakfast, we commenced our exploration of the cave.

We had no difficulty in entering it, although we were thoroughly drenched by the sheet of water, back of which, protected by shelving rocks, was an open space, leading to the cave. I have not language to describe the feeling of awe with which I was struck upon entering the portals of this grand and glowing structure, made by no mortal hands. All that I had read of in boyish romance, all that a vivid and erratic imagination had conceived of a subterranean world was tame and commonplace compared with this sublimely stupendous work of nature. But to proceed: With lighted torches we cautiously commenced our march, admiring the giant stalactites that reflected in unguished rays the light from our torches. We had proceeded but a short distance, when we observed what appeared to be a trail, worn in the rock. We at once decided to follow it. We had followed it but a short distance, when, passing through a bed of dust, we discovered Indian tracks, recently formed. We at first were startled at this discovery, but after a little reflection, we decided that in such a place tracks would remain apparently fresh for years—and then, after our fears had subsided, we were encouraged with the idea that the tracks would facilitate our exploration. We were correct in our supposition, for had we not followed the trail made by the Indians, we would have been left in more than Egyptian darkness. But I anticipate—accordingly, we followed on, cheered by the hope of soon emerging into the broad glare of day. Of one thing we were assured—namely, that there was an inlet as well as an outlet, for a strong current of air was meeting us, and our torches turned bright and rapidly—to our surprise, for our stock of fat pine was dimming very fast. I thought of sending Mike back for a fresh supply, when, turning a sharp angle of the passage, we met, face to face, two tall and manly looking Indians. Language cannot express the astonishment and rage that was depicted on their countenances upon being held up, and had it been in their power, we would have been doomed to inevitable destruction. But after a while, I ascertained that one of them spoke a little Spanish, and with some difficulty I made them understand that we had been directed through the mysterious passage by the Great Spirit. They then told me in broken Spanish, that we were scarcely half way through the pass—that a little further on was an immense chasm, but that it was bridged by logs—which we found petrified—and that there were other passages that led into lakes and rivers, but without any outlet. They said that this pass was only known to their tribe and ourselves; it had been mentioned to Major S.—, but had never been shown to him; that they were the great medicine men of their tribe, and were returning from a visit to the white tribe at the eastern end of the pass. They then gave us some of their torches—bid us good bye, and departed. We congratulated each other on our good fortune and continued our march in high spirits. We found the chasm a yawning abyss, into which had been thrown many victims of savage cruelty, for at the bottom, by the aid of a torch thrown down, we discovered the bones of many human frames. We found nothing more to obstruct our passage except a few massive boulders, which we however passed, and on the morning of the fourth day we entered the village of the white Indians.

Future Housekeepers.

We sometimes catch ourselves wondering how many of the young ladies whom we meet with are to perform the part of housekeepers, when the young men who now eye them so admiringly have persuaded them to become their wives.

We listen to these young ladies of whom we speak, and here them not only acknowledging, but boasting of their ignorance of all housewife duties, as if nothing would so lower them in the esteem of their friends as the confession of an inability to bake bread and pies, or cook a piece of meat, or a disposition to engage in any useful employment. Speaking from our own youthful recollections, we are free to say, that taper fingers and lily white hands are very pretty to look at with a young man's eyes, and sometimes we have known the artless innocence of practical knowledge displayed by a young Miss, to appear rather interesting than otherwise. But we have lived long enough to learn that life is full of rough experiences, and that the most loving, romantic and delicate people must live on cooked or otherwise prepared food, and in homes kept clean and tidy, by industrious hands. And for all the practical purposes of married life, it is generally found that for the husband to sit and gaze at a wife's taper fingers and lily hands, or a wife to sit and be looked at and admired, does not make the pot boil or put the smallest piece of food in the pot.

What, then, is to become of married couples whose contribution to the stock with which they set up, is on the one side taper fingers, lily hands and utter ignorance of all household economy, and on the other a capacity for being fascinated with fairy fancies and delicate complexions seen by moonlight? How are these couples to live, when it comes to the simple question of bread and butter. Or even supposing that the male partner brings with him industry and application and substantial earnings, what is the other partner to do with the proceeds of his toil. She can't work, cook, sweep—she can play the piano, the guitar, and on a pinch, make a jelly or cake. But any thing so vulgar and commonplace as cooking a substantial meal is out of the question. Really, it seems to us, with our old fashioned notions, that before a young man ventures upon matrimony with one of the sort of girls we are talking about, he should calculate whether his resources will permit him to marry, besides his wife, a posse of cooks, chambermaids, washerwomen, &c., to take care of the establishment. Poor young men, with nothing but their industry to depend upon, had better look sharp beforehand.

To My Wife.

In the morning when you rise,
Kiss your husband—wash your eyes;
Be as happy all the day,
As the singing birds in May.

Never let your sense of quiet
Be disturbed by any riot;
Always keep in equal mind—
Fling your sorrow to the wind.

In the evening after tea,
Sing a song and merry be;
Gather up the little "buds,"
And lay aside their little "duds."

Teach their little hearts to pray,
At the gentle close of day;
Then, happy that you ever wed,
Say your prayers and go to bed.

AN AMATEUR BEAR-HUNT.—Nine bears driven by the fire from their homes in Washington county, lately undertook to migrate to Vermont. While swimming the bay a couple of miles from Whitehall, a woman and dogs gave chase to an old she bear that was swimming, with her cubs. They roved up to the old lady and rapped her head with an oar. She turned and put her paws on the edge of the boat and proposed to come aboard to settle the matter. At the same time the cubs and another big bear turned about to see if it was a "free fight," and if so they wanted to be "counted in." The boatmen, finding a bigger fight than they had bargained for, proposed a "compromise," and both parties made a straight wake for the shore in opposite directions. It is generally supposed that the woman and boys will not soon go on another bear-hunt on Lake Champlain.—Troy Traveller.

THE MIRAGE IN CALIFORNIA.—Mr. C. D. Gibbons, writing from Tulare Lake to the San Joaquin Republican, says: We had frequent opportunities of observing the phenomenon in nature called mirage; when at eighteen miles distance, the lake would appear to be almost within a stone-throw, and had we not known the distance, might have been induced, during the exceedingly hot weather in the early part of July, to travel fifteen miles off would loom up so that they could be seen distinctly in their natural size and state, and immediately under, other trees, but in an inverted position. We also observed horses walking along naturally and inverted.

SNAKE-BITES AND IODINE.—Dr. Whitmore (in the N. West Med. and Surg. Journal for January,) recommends the tincture of iodine as a cure for the bites of venomous reptiles in man and beast, which he says he has used with success in the bites of rattlesnakes, copper-heads, &c. It puts an end to the swelling and pain in from twelve to sixteen hours. He paints the bitten part over the whole swelling with three or four coats of the tincture twice a day, renewing the application when the swelling extends, which it often does at the first application.

A French author says: "When I lost my wife, every family offered me another; out when I lost my horse, no one offered to make him good."

THE greatest remedy for expelling worms from children. The most safe, pleasant and efficient medicine known for the removal of worms from children is Dr. Easterly's Vermifuge.

Parents and guardians having the charge of children, should watch carefully the symptoms of worms in these children, and as soon as symptoms indicate their presence, they should resort at once to the use of Dr. Easterly's Vermifuge. More children die from worms than from all other diseases, and a more miserable object can scarcely be imagined than a child suffering under the ordinary symptoms of worms. Parents, mark this, will you not blame your child for dying, when you could have saved it by the use of Dr. Easterly's Vermifuge in time? The Vermifuge will remove every species of worms from the system in six or eight days after taking.
